The New Fall Coats BY MRS. OSBORN

PARIS, Sept. 2.
PAQUIN, the arbiter of fashion for the world, has presented to fashionable society the Empire coat as a garment for all occasions. It is, says the great French designer, to be worn morning, noon and night, in cheap and fine goods and in all colors and almost all materials.

Together with the Empire coat the new tight, or comparatively tight, sleeve is handed out to us. The tight sleeve would be too sudden a change from the bags and puffs and draperies we have been wearing upon our arms.

The new sleeve fits to the arm loosely, but quite following its outline, and, where puffs are used, they are not large nor full, but merely ample enough to form a contrast with the fitted cuff at the elbow or below it.

The Empire coat gives height—or the appearance of it—to a short figure, but it is somewhat trying to a tall woman. It is not likely that any but women who endeavor to be smartly gowned will adopt the Empire coat to any great extent this season; it is too much of a novelty to fit well over last season's garments and these are what many women will wear for a while longer.

The Empire coat is the outcome of the usual desire for change; the adoption of the fitted bodice and Princess dress, and the new make of skirts, which are full at the bottom and fitted over the hips.

There is no fullness in most of the new garments from bust to hips, so that the Empire coat may drop into graceful lines of its own without any suggestion of being held out by bulky under draperies. Its length and fullness presuppose fullness at the bottom of the skirt, otherwise the coat would look top heavy.

As to sleeves, coats used to wear over fancy waists must have width of arm-hole and more fullness of sleeve than any other garment, so the Empire coat will have sleeves varying from somewhat full to as great closeness as the undersleeves will permit.

In length the sleeves will hang in elbow and three-quarter lengths. Paquin strictly adheres to the three-quarter sleeves and other modistes modify this to suit their tastes and the circumstances and make sleeves long or elbow lengths.

I think the three-quarter sleeves ungraceful and shall advise elbow sleeves, which do not destroy the contour and line of the arm, and which are just as practical, so far as warmth is concerned, as the three-quarter sleeves.

The short-sleeved Empire coat is intended for dress occasions, or, at least, to be worn by women not dependent upon street cars as

The young men's hat will have a 1½-inch brim, while the deeper crown style will carry a brim 1½ inches wide. Either a silk or cloth band may be worn, though the latter seems to have the preference.

It is not too early to refer to the huzzed-up vogue of silk hats and to comment upon the fact that the fashion is in accord with the wardrobe of every correctly dressed gentleman. The Fall silk hat will be made in two heights of crown, 3½ and 4½ inches. The former will be the more popular. The young men's hat will have a 1½-inch brim, while the deeper crown style will carry a brim 1½ inches wide. Either a silk or a straw hat will be worn, although the latter seems to have the preference.

The opera hat—first cousin to the more formal silk hat—and a necessity to every woman of good breeding for entertainers and amusement seekers, will be worn in the same dimensions as its shiner and more dignified of To-day Gives a Cold Welcome to

Two Little Ones,
Although Her Great-

Had Five--Says the U. S. Government
Special Census Bulletin.

By RENE BACHE.

THE Government Bureau of the Census, in a special bulletin now on the point of publication, declares that the race of children in the United States is showing a tendency to die out. Not nearly so many of them are born as formerly. The women of this country are not bringing them into the world with anything like the regularity of earlier days, and, if the decrease in the birth rate, which has been steadily progressing during the last 100 years, be not checked, we may, in the not distant future, reach a time when the supply of little people will be inadequate to maintain the population.

It appears that the number of children for each 1,000 adults in the population of the United States has been running down during the last century at a surprising rate. One hundred years ago boys and girls under ten years of age constituted one-third of the total population; to-day they are less than one-fourth of the whole.

In other words, in 1900, one in every three persons in this country was less than ten years old, whereas at the present time only one in four belongs to the age-group.

The number of children under five years of age is now only three-fifths of what it was seventy-five years ago, proportionately to the population. This means that there are but three little boys and girls where there used to be five. If the rate of reproduction of a century ago had been maintained, unfortunately this rate of reproduction, through the operation of causes which will probably be discussed, has not only failed to maintain itself, but seems likely to continue to drop.

Perhaps the cause appears even more striking when it is said that, proportionately to population, there were four children under five years of age at the time of the outbreak of the Civil War, to-day there are only three. There has been an exceptional large relative reduction in the number of little folks during the last fifty years in Maryland, Kentucky, Michigan, Illinois and Indiana.

In New England the situation is at its worst, the birth rate being lower than anywhere else in the United States, except in California and the District of Columbia.

The influence of religion upon the birth rate (which is very marked) is illustrated by Utah, where more children are born proportionately to the population than in any other State of the Union.

Whereas the Mormon influence is felt, the birth rate is high, and this is why Idaho makes a remarkably creditable showing in the production of babies. On the other hand, there is a hand of States running from Maine to California (Maine by itself) in which there are less than fifty children under five for every 100 women of child-bearing age, a record far from satisfactory.

The fewest little children are found in California and the District of Columbia, where there are only thirty-three for every one hundred women of child-bearing age. In the Southern States there are three small girls and boys against every two in the North, taking the people in groups of hundreds.

There are in the rural districts in this country, residing in the same way, three children for every two girls. This means, of course, that the farmers' wives are more prolific than the women of large towns.

But it should be explained that these facts apply to the whole of the United States, and that in the North just about as many babies are born in the cities as in farmsteads and villages, while on the other hand, in the South there come into the world only one little infant for every two additions to agricultural communities. The record in the West falls between these extremes.

The records of the Census Bureau show that the birth rate per 100 of population in the United States was 31 in 1850 and less than 27 in 1900--a loss in a single generation of about one child in seven. In every 100 persons there were a century ago.

25 under 10 years of age; to-day there are slightly less than 24. The official figures showing the decrease during the 100-year period are as follows:

Year.	Total population.	Children under 10.	Per cent. children under 10.
1800	5,306,483	1,776,000	33.5
1810	5,848,000	2,000,000	34.2
1820	7,239,000	2,450,000	33.8
1830	9,190,000	3,100,000	33.7
1840	12,869,100	4,224,000	32.9
1850	17,063,000	5,440,000	31.9
1860	23,191,000	6,700,000	28.9
1870	31,545,100	9,000,000	28.5
1880	39,826,271	10,820,400	27.2
1890	50,155,782	13,300,175	26.5
1900	75,994,574	17,998,991	23.7

The decline in the birth rate began about the year 1810, and it has been going on ever since, the production of children falling lower and lower. An examination of the figures given shows will

The disparity between urban and rural communities in respect to the production of children is nothing less than astonishing. One hundred and sixty cities of 25,000 and upward have at the present time 300 children under five to every 1,000 women of child-bearing age. The country outside of these cities has 272 children under five to every 1,000 women. Which means that in great towns proportionately to population, there are only two children for every one in the cities of New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Ohio, however, there are almost as many children in the rural districts; whereas, on the other hand, in the States of the South there is only one fourth baby for two babies in agricultural communities. This situation is due probably to the fact that hundreds of immigrants have been arriving here in the Northern cities in recent years and have been breeding with great rapidity.

Map Showing the Number of Children Under Five Years of Age to Each 1,000 Females Between Fifteen and Forty-nine Years of Age, According to the Census of 1900.

folks in rural districts than in one city; and this remark applies particularly to young married people, who in urban communities are much sicker than in the country.

When one comes to consider the causes responsible for the decrease in the birth rate the problem is found to be somewhat complicated. A very distinguished authority, General Francis A. Walker, says: "The decline in the rate of increase of the American population begins with the rapid influx of immigrants. As the foreigners began to arrive in larger numbers the native people more and more withdrew their own increase."

Another famous authority, Dr. John S. Billings, says: "The decline indicates a progressive loss of fertility--a loss of power of both sexes to produce children? There is no good reason for thinking anything of the kind."

"Are alcohol and tobacco in any measure accountable? Hardly. Frequent use is to be avoided in these countries where sobriety and abstinence are most freely used."

"Are we to suppose that migration from rural districts to cities, the increase of wealth and luxury, and the so-called emancipation of women have anything to do with the problem? Yes, it cannot be denied that these are contributing causes, influencing the birth rate by lessening the number of marriages at early ages and by favoring divorce."

"But the main cause beyond question is the deliberate refusal on the part of great numbers of married people to have children. Another cause is the great increase in the use of things which formerly were considered luxuries, but which now have become necessities. The greater temptation to expensiveness for the purpose of securing or maintaining social position leads to the desire to have fewer children in order that they may each be better provided for. In the matter may be wholly selfish."

"In the struggle for what is deemed an acceptable mode of existence at the present time, marriage is held less desirable, and the family size is reduced. Thus, their forty years ago, young women were gradually being induced with the idea that marriage and motherhood are not to be taken about as lightly as they are now."

Birth Rate Will Fall Still Lower.

Dr. Billings concludes by saying that such a state of things has occurred before in the world's history; for example, in ancient and modern Europe during the decline of the Roman Empire. It is his opinion that, inasmuch as the causes above mentioned are likely to continue to be operative, the birth rate in the United States from this time on will have a tendency to fall still lower.

"China," it has been said, "has the graves of mankind." The death rate is always much higher and the birth rate much lower in urban communities than in rural districts. In our cities the death rate among negroes is particularly high owing chiefly to the unsanitary conditions under which they live.

But the death rate of the colored population is everywhere abnormal, 297 negro babies out of every 1,000 dying before they reach the age of one year, whereas only 145 white infants in each 1,000 fail to reach the age of twelve months.

The average person in the United States is twenty-two years and the woman old. A century ago the average age was only sixteen years, but since 1820 it has increased at the rate of eight months per decade. Chilly enough, it appears that the average person living in this country is older than the average person living in three and a half years before than the average person existing in another three and a half years.

So the olden days, when children and more old folks (for the child) in the great towns there are more people in middle life. In every 1,000 of the population there are 141 persons under five years of age, and of these twenty-five are babies less than twelve months old. There are more young folks in Utah than in any other State in the Union, and the population in California there are fewer young babies than anywhere else.

One of the conclusions drawn by the Census Bureau is that the rapid growth of the population in this country is steadily increasing. This, it may be said, shows some small consolation for the fact that the birth rate is falling.

There Are Only Three Children Now Where There Were Five in 1830.

The Birth Rate Has Fallen One Per Cent During a Decade Since 1810.

show that the decrease has averaged about 1 per cent for every ten years during the century.

The greatest drop occurred from 1840 to 1850 and from 1860 to 1870. The next largest decrease was in the period from 1880 to 1890. The birth rate was 31 in 1810, 29 in 1820, 28 in 1830, 27 in 1840, 26 in 1850, 25 in 1860, 24 in 1870, 23 in 1880, 22 in 1890, and 21 in 1900. Let adequate explanation be put upon the fact that there are today only three-fourths as many living children to each 1,000 potential mothers as there were in 1810.

The drop in the birth rate is strikingly shown by the fact that, whereas in 1840 there were 634 children under five for every 1,000 women of child-bearing age (fifteen to forty-nine years), there were only 572 in 1870, 529 in 1890, 465 in 1900. This means that there are today only three-fourths as many living children to each 1,000 potential mothers as there were in 1840.

In the District of Columbia there is only one child under five for every four women of child-bearing age. This represents the minimum. The maximum is found in North Dakota and Indian Territory, where there are two children under five for every three women. The States with less than four babies to every ten women are New York, Ohio and all of New England. The Districts of Columbia and one State of the Far West, California, are in the same class.

The States with four to five children to every ten women include all of the Northeastern States as far south as the Potomac, several States of the Upper Mississippi Valley and three States of the Far West--Washington, Oregon and Nevada. It should be realized, by the way, that in those States of the Far West there is a considerable under-supply of females, the "excess" of available wives tending to induce the production of babies somewhat.

The States with from five to six children for every ten women include most of the border States and several in the Northwest. In a majority of the States of the Far South, and also in some of the rapidly growing agricultural States (the Dakotas and Oklahoma), the proportion runs up over all, and the same is true of the two States in which the influence of the Mormon Church is most potent--Utah and Idaho.

In respect to baby-production the contrast between Utah and the States immediately east and west of it is the sharpest of the two States in the latest census figures, has, per 1,000 women, 232 more little children than California, 225 more than Nevada and 200 more than Illinois. The only approach to these figures, across all States, is made by the District of Columbia, which, to each 1,000 women, has 173 fewer small children than Maryland.

Utah has the fewest babies of any State in the Union. Mention was made above of its States, in which the decline of the birth rate has been most rapid. Figures showing the extent of their fall during the last fifty years are as follows:

State.	Children under 5 yrs. 1850.	Children under 5 yrs. 1900.	Decrease per 1,000 women, in 50 years.
Utah	232	100	132
Idaho	225	100	125
Nevada	200	100	100
Illinois	173	100	73
California	141	100	41
District of Columbia	100	100	0
Indian Territory	702	425	277

popular, both for wraps and gowns, but how many women can afford velvet?
Buckram among leading fabrics for Autumn and Winter are pique, in colored piece-dyed goods, bouillonné, drap d'ère, serge, mixed goods for suitings and gowns.

In colors, pinks and greens will vie with each other, a very smart hue when it can be appropriately worn. Other smart colors are blue of the medium variety, green and light gray. Very little brown appears in the new Autumn dress materials, but a quantity of gray mixtures are to be found. Gray is effective and can usually be warmed up by a touch of color.

Stripes are a distinct or indifferent feature in Autumn materials, for the smart stripes are of the almost invisible sort. They are quiet lines of contrast that afford a touch of relief from the monotony and monotony of which we have begun to tire. It is said that the bright pinks and stripes will be affected only by young girls and by some women for shirt waists.

For evening wear soft pompadour satins will continue anything new. Practically everything is purchased for evening wear, and girls of fortune and chit-fortune look as though fresh blossoms had drifted across pale tinted clouds of glimmering pearl and blue and rose color.

Even gowns and dresses appear in pompadour effects.

In evening silks nothing is more beautiful than the new Oriental prints. It is silk between lace, rose silk and lilies, having weight with softness. It comes embroidered in flights of butterflies in the palest tints of their natural colors, and with separate butterflies cut out and attached with outspread wings to the material.

The same silks now pieces come in all-white embroidery and in delicate pink cherry blossoms, lovely mauve violets, iris and other colored blossoms. The embroidery is arranged to come on the sleeves, cuffs, collar, back, front and belt line of the bodice, and on the front, sides and back of the skirt.

One of these tulle robes in steel gray is worked to pink and silver-gray flowers and foliage in beautiful effect.

Pompeo poplin is a new heavy silk which will be very smart for opera cloaks. It comes in dash lengths, embroidered richly down the fronts and where trimming is required on the long, semi-long garment. These will be lined with fur.

Broadies appear among the smart Autumn fabrics, made of heavy but soft satin and silk, and intended for some of the quiet Directoire and Empire gowns and wraps which are coming into vogue. A great many wraps will be made of broadie, and fine lustrous furs will be used a great deal this season for linings to small wraps, partly because the Eastern war and our tariff have made real furs scarce and partly because linings are so good that fashionable folk have taken them up as a fad.

One of the smartest fads of the season is to have a set of trousse, collar and cuff of fur decorated with chiffon or lace ruffles, and sometimes with flowers and bows as well. The collar is a small, narrow stole with ends and edges covered by the ruffles, which hang below the belt in front. The muff is curved and wide enough to put the arms in snugly to the elbows, and the small toque is trimmed on one side and between the crown and brim with a bit of circle and between the crown and brim with a bit willings, Scotch plaids and mohairs are all lighter fitting and do not blouse at all. The collars between the bust and belt follows the line of the figure and does not hug over the belt as in times past.

In colored waists, called blue bands, and among strictly new styles what is known as the English waist is becoming quite popular. It is tucked crosswise in groups of tucks, often from neck to bust and then hangs loose to the belt.

It is possible that late in the Winter plaid and striped and fancy colored waists will have a vogue, but at present white promises to be worn almost exclusively up to mid-Winter. Waists fasten either in the back or front, the very fancy ones lavishly fastening in the back.

Flannel waists will only be popular for the cheap trade.

In dress materials cloth will lead in the lighter and medium weights. Velvet will be enormous of the trimming which decorates the collar. Some of these are in velvet, trimmed with lace and chiffon, but they are fascinating in effect and very becoming. The net illustrated in this number is of sable trimmed with point lace and is worth thousands of dollars.

The same style of set can be made at home by clever seamstresses for a few dollars, by using imitation fur, some other style of lace or chiffon, or else by using velvet instead of fur.

Bracelets and Earrings in Vogue.
Colored jewels set in diamonds will be quite the rage this season, and the dog collar, often with a small bow tie, is a feature of the Autumn and Winter. Bracelets and earrings have both come into vogue, showing a popular fancy for ostentatious display. The former in antique settings. Jewels will be so much worn that handbags, powder boxes, vanity boxes and pouches of all sorts will be stuffed with them.

The small bolero jacket will be a garment as useful as it is smart, especially during the early Autumn, when heavier wraps would be more uncomfortable. The bolero to be worn this season is of a make at once very simple and very smart. It has cap-like sleeves with a little more poke in the back below the neck. It may be made of tulle, silk or cloth, and the same style is used for flannel dressing capes and little chiffrons and low draped jackets on top.

Glance at the picture will be sufficient for any woman who knows how to use her scissors and needle, for there are no tucks or pleats or fancy lines to copy, merely a fitted rock, scalloped edges and loose bonnet effect.

Collar and cuff sets are very necessary for the simple coats worn for evening purposes. They are made of tulle, chiffon or some similar wrap of goods, and are embroidered to suit the fancy or even beaded, as in the case of tulle, which takes braiding very effectively.

In the hair, this Winter, women will wear two combs in the back, the lower one smaller than the upper, and both jeweled at the top. These will be varied by the old Colonial type of comb, for a different set of combs, and it is more than probable that the Colonial comb will share favor with its sister—the Spanish comb, high and broad and intended to be used effectively in draping the mantilla over the head.

As mantling will be among the smart Autumn and Winter styles, the Spanish comb will be practically inevitable, although as yet not worn.

The diamond and pearl studded comb set illustrated by Mrs. L. Ludwig, and the English waist, of rose-colored silk crepe, with a satin yoke embroidered in delicate pompadour roses and agreed to be made under a hand of skilled milliners, designed for A. A. Vantine & Co. This waist shows the new yoke line, which is really a chemise effect, taking in the points and curves along the sides. Shows for dress and house wear and even on suitings for this season. House and evening shoes show beautiful open effects in leather over the instep and along the sides, and handsome embroideries on the season's novelty, the Empire or Directoire Coat, as assigned by Redfern, in the accompanying illustration, showing the short waisted fitted top, sleeves sloping to a fitted, three-quarter length and a full skirt. It is in brocade, and in two shades of green.

Lace Stocks and Chemisettes.
Buttons will be so much used as trimmings that they can nearly always be had in two or more shades of the same sort, silk buttons embroidered in wreaths and single blossoms being shown in great variety.

Gloves will show more elaboration in blue, black, knife-pleatings and knife-pleated bands than ever before, and these trimmings will supplant made-up designs to a great extent. They are combined with small corsets and bows and the designs are more or less irregular in character with a general trend towards horizontal effects.

Lace trimmings will be dappled in character and embroidery will show a mingling of "laid" styles with open work. Handiwork upon lace will be smart, and also gold and silver lace.

Silk and satin folds and pleatings will appear largely upon gowns of the same color but of a different fabric, and the different materials so combined produce light and shadow effects that are very attractive.

The season's modes show a continuation of the use of high lace stocks and little lace chemisettes, with sleeves to match, and these will probably remain in vogue for a long time. When lace sleeves are not worn below the elbow or flange of fancy ones of some sort-long gloves will be worn. Both lace and embroidered kid are popular in long gloves, some without any buttons and some with two or three at the wrist. There is a general tendency towards undressed kid for the coming season, but this fashion is not positive, as this sort of glove both sells and wears out quickly, although it is always more attractive than a glove.

Belt is all narrower, in Paris we affect what may be termed the Parisian belt, one of which is shown on this page, twice as wide in the front as in the back, and usually fastened in the back. This style of belt is often of the same width all around, or, if dressed kid, with a three-bar buckle in front, which, when the belt is cranked, gives the right outline.

Cheaper forms of belts for the general public are being shown in narrow widths with small buckles in the front, although many fancy varieties of belts of varying widths are being shown by the shops to tempt the fancy of the affluent public. Whatever the style, however, in silk belts the buckle must match the color of the silk if one would be really smart.

Lady Duff Gordon, whose every move is the lead of the firm known as the Maison Martin, professes to object seriously to French fashions, although she believes in the foundation of French art as an inspiration for modern dress and spends most of her time in Paris, and it is to these designs and works out in concrete form the "inspirations" which she afterwards displays on the fashion show stage.

Lady Duff Gordon regards the Christmas advent of the effervescent as an impossibility among people of style and judgment in England or America. "Full skirts if you like," she says, in writing to me her opinion from Paris, "but let those full skirts follow the natural lines of the figure, and allow time to sway and swing delicately in harmony with each movement. They must not billow and balloon about one such a condition of affairs is regarded as ridiculous and monstrous to the eye and unbecoming in regard to the emotions that should be affected by the sight of a perfectly composed woman."

dressed kid, carried out in small designs closely worked both in silk and kid-velvet, black and gray.

The embroideries or the shoes themselves—match the color of the gown worn with them.

Stockings show fine silk grounds sprinkled over with small bunches and sprays of flowers worked in colored silks, and open-work stockings will not be worn except in the house with low satin slippers, even then appearing less smart than the simpler hosiery with its dainty embroidered blossoms.

SUNDAY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER PATTERNS.

THE ever-charming shirt waist is resolving itself into two styles this season. There is to be the trim tailored waist and the more dainty lingerie waist. To be smart and fashionable you will require at least two of each kind of shirt waist for fall wear.

The designs for two of the new waists are shown herewith. The patterns are ten cents each, accompanied by complete instructions for making the garments yourself at home. Tucks give a much desired effect in the design for waist No. 187-2960. The double breast down the back is a novel feature, while the skirt diamante can be omitted if desired. For a medium size this waist requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material. The pattern comes in six sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

The most stunning model in tucked shirt waists are extremely simple in their construction and rely almost entirely upon the mode of applied tucks or trimming pieces to create for them their individuality and unique appearance. The pattern No. 188-3031 indicates modishness in the novel tuck and cuffs, each showing sharp points marked with it or lustrous. The point motif is further carried out in the tucks of the front, which provide fullness over it later. It can be worn with a blouse of this kind, but its real taffeta, as equally appropriate. For Fall and Winter a Ladies' shirt waist is found very good for a shirt blouse. It will be much used in the new season shirt waists. For a medium size this pattern demands three yards of 36 inch material. The pattern is in six sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

Fill in the proper blank for each pattern desired, giving name, bust measure and post-office address, and mail with ten cents in money or stamps to

THE CUT-OUT STORY OF CINDERELLA

CHAPTER IV. The Prince Finds Cinderella Again and They Live Happy Ever After.

IN last Sunday's cut-out Cinderella was left awaiting herself at the Prince's ball. But it didn't last very long. Just as the clock was tolling the midnight hour Cinderella remembered that her fairy godmother had told her to be sure to leave at 12 o'clock.

So Cinderella rescued herself right in the middle of a polka and fled. Of course the Prince ran after her, but Cinderella had gone when he got to the castle gate. On the steps she had lost one of her glass slippers.

"It's a clue," said the Prince, picking her up. "I'll advertise for the owner and marry her."

And that's how the Prince found Cinderella again. He fitted on the slipper to make sure that she was really the girl who lost it, and then they got married and lived happy ever after.

Keep Out of Debt—You Keep Out of Slavery.

"The borrower is servant to the lender," Proverbs xxii, 7.

NO man knows better than the borrower how true this picture is. And every man that is in debt, or that has lived under the curse of debt, will gladly hand this page to some young man or woman, reinforcing its teachings with words much stronger than those to be written here.

KEEP OUT OF DEBT. Make that your watchword in life. Free from debt, you are a free man. With debts hanging over you, freedom is gone, independence, and that feeling of energy that makes success easy.

The simplest, and really THE EASIEST, way to attain prosperity and independence is to make it an absolute rule never to buy what you cannot pay for, and never to borrow of anyone.

There is no greater material curse in our civilized life than the loose credit system that prevails among us.

Encouraging men and women to run into debt is a crime, and every man evidently wilfully engaged in enslaving others through debt should be made to lose his money.

Credit is necessary to commerce—of course it is. But credit is not necessary to the individual. There is no reason why the young and foolish, or the old and foolish, should be lured into buying what is beyond their means. Debt for all purchases is a necessary evil of life should be outlawed by statute. There should be laws to protect weak human nature against itself, as well as laws to protect the merchant against loss. Naturally, every bargain entered into in good faith on both sides should be carried out to the letter. But merchants and lenders should not be encouraged to lure people into debt, merely because they know that the laws and a sense of honor will force payment at whatever sacrifice in misery and worry to the debtor.

The law recognizes this principle in dealing with men under twenty-one years of age. A young man of twenty is called in law an "infant," and debts contracted at that age may be legally repudiated by him when he reaches twenty-one.

The law says that you lend such a boy money or sell goods, to him at your own risk.

It should say the same in all transactions in which it is apparent that the purpose of lender or seller is to prey on the weakness of human nature, and make profits out of it.

The welfare of all classes should be the chief interest of the lawmakers, and in the present loose credit conditions, permitting schemers to get men and women in their debt, there is failure to recognize a right ABOVE THE RIGHT TO MAKE MONEY, and that is the right of the individual to protection from schemers of all kinds; to be protected when necessary, and when it can be done, AGAINST THEIR OWN WEAKNESS OF CHARACTER.

Today, however, we want to talk directly to readers about their own plan in life—the question of changing laws is a big one. There should be protection of human nature's weakness as well as for a dealer's claims—but changes in laws that must interfere with money-making plans are hard to make. The laws thus far are principally crystallized demands of money, and any change must come slowly.

You, the individual, however, do not need to wait for new laws. Why not make an absolute resolution to "protect yourself"?

Make up your mind that you will not allow yourself to slip into the slavery of debt.

If you are in debt now, lend every energy to get out, and then STAY OUT.

It is largely a question of habit, and of strengthening that part of the mind which enables us to say "No" to ourselves.

What is it that makes a man run in debt? It is the foolish idea that he will be able LATER, in some mysterious, unexplained way, to pay for a thing THAT HE CANNOT PAY FOR NOW. Just make up your mind that what you cannot do NOW you will never be able to do.

Debt is a LOAD. It is a mass of solid lead weighing down upon the debtor.

If you find it hard to swim, to keep your head above water, at present, how will it be when the waves weight press down on you?

Wives should impress this fact upon their husbands, and upon their children.

If a wife can influence her husband to keep out of debt, she can make it practically sure that his life will not be a failure. Every man is good for SOME evil—at the big bank for fifty thousand, or at the grocery store for two dollars.

Make no debts at all, PAY AS YOU GO, and if you can't pay—don't GO.

Don't go to the theatre if it means that you must run behind in rent or weekly bills.

Don't go out in fine new clothes if YOU CAN'T PAY FOR THEM THE DAY YOU PUT THEM ON.

A man is more comfortable in old clothes that are paid for than in new clothes that interest nobody but himself, and that prove him to be a vain, weak man, unable to deny a foolish craving which threatens his whole career.

A very successful man, known all over the United States, was talking recently to a friend—a man younger than himself—earnings a very large income.

Said the older and wiser man: "How much have you saved up?"

"Nothing," was the answer. "In fact, I owe about twenty thousand dollars; but that makes no difference with such an income as mine."

Said the older, wiser man: "It makes a great difference. It makes ALL the difference. Take my advice, get out of debt. And if you want any man of strength to think well of you, don't tell him what you have just told me. If any man wanted to go into a scheme with you, what you have just said would frighten him off."

"He would think your income might be due to luck or to passing fancy. The fact that you run behind would make him feel sure that you would soon lose your power."

"Whereas, if you had money saved, he would look upon you as a man ABLE TO CONTROL YOURSELF, and therefore liable to control your job and your income indefinitely."

Young men will do well to think over this advice—they would all be very glad to listen to the man that gave it.

The best proof of a man's strength is his POWER TO CONTROL HIMSELF. You respect the man that saves his money on a big or a little income.

Every dollar saved means that the man has been ABLE TO SAY "NO." For every dollar in our foolish scale of living there is some imaginary want.

Every dollar earned could be spent in a dozen ways. If the owner of it were weak enough to yield to passing fancies, and for every dollar earned and spent another could be added to the load of debt.

The man that has no debts, and that has saved some money, proves that he can control himself.

The other kind of man, the man in debt, or the man always skimming along the edge of debt, is simply a feather blown in the wind. Other things control him—the temptation in a store window, the false suggestion of a friend, the desire for admiration—HE DOES NOT CONTROL HIMSELF.

The wise, successful man whom we have quoted said very truly that you start with a big handicap the moment you are bound to confess that you haven't any money of your own.

Everybody knows YOU WOULD LIKE TO HAVE SOME. If you HADN'T got it, it is proof that you cannot do for yourself what you want to do. Why should the future employer or partner believe that you will do any better for HIM than you have done FOR YOURSELF?

Ask any big employer what he thinks of the worker who is always asking for a little money in advance. He knows that such a man is in debt. He knows that he lacks brains or strength of character to manage his own affairs, and he concludes that a better worker might easily be found.

We repeat that wives can do everything for their husbands, by fighting resolutely against the tendency to run in debt.

The temptation is great. The man who loves his wife wants her to think well of him, and he wants to see her happy. He wants her to dress as well as the woman next door. But suppose the woman next door has a fool for a husband, suppose she is an extravagant fool herself. Don't let your husband follow a fool's example, under the impression that he is showing respect for you.

We do not suggest MEANNESS in family expenditures. Wives and children should be provided for as well as a man can afford—but NOT BETTER THAN THE MAN CAN AFFORD.

Don't let the present eat up the future.

Take one old couple living in plenty and in peace of mind. You will find, unless they inherited wealth—that economy and self-denial were features of their early married life. There is no end to the number of successful men that owe their prosperity to wise, prudent wives, being sold and fighting against it.

And the list is pathetically long of the ruined men and ruined houses due to selfishness and debt-contrasting on one side and

Neither a borrower nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.

There you have it in a nutshell, and in shape easily remembered.

Have strength of mind to say "NO" to others. Reckless friends in actual need.

Careless lending, as Shakespeare says, OFTEN causes the loss of both friend and money. And it comes from weakness, as does the debt habit—from inability to say "No" to ourselves or to others.

Borrowing does indeed "DULL THE EDGE OF HUSBANDRY."

It discourages effort more than anything else. The saddest sight in the old life of Hades was poor Sisyphus rolling his rock up the hill, only to have it roll down again over and over—and every borrower is a Sisyphus in real life—the bond is always too much for him, and his life is one of discouragement. He struggles up a little way, then it rolls back down again. The man in debt has no courage to get ahead. Debt dulls the edge of his "husbandry," his effort to save and thrive.

Men have always known of the power of the lender and the slavery of the borrower, yet the lesson has to be learned over and over.

"The rich reckon with the poor," says the book of Proverbs. "And the borrower is SERVANT to the lender."

How well that is understood by those that want to keep men down.

The old scheme of mine-owners, against which the unions had to fight, was TO KEEP THE MEN ALWAYS IN DEBT TO THE COMPANY'S STORE. As long as they were in debt they were helpless. They could not move away. They dared not complain, they had to take what was given them.

In the horrible dens of great cities, where human beings are kept against their will, the same idea is applied.

The police tell us that the unhappy victims are kept ALWAYS IN DEBT, so that they are powerless to free themselves.

As ready as the rap of the borrower's" is another saying. It means as ready as the borrower is ready to pull off his cap luncheon at the end of the hour.

Keep your cap on your head, your back straight and free from debts. Think less about how you look TO others, than how you are able to look AT others. Be able to hold your head and look every man in the eye, and fear the disapproval of none.

OWN what you have on, and above all, OWN YOUR OWN FUTURE. Don't mortgage THAT, for it is the principal base of all of us.

KEEP OUT OF DEBT.

French and Spanish Ladies of High Degree Flock to Watering Places Where the Young Monarch Disports Himself

MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE TELLS OF MANY THINGS

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE

Special cable to Sunday American. Paris, Sept. 9.—A most interesting and important event has just taken place in the young King of Spain preparing to visit the French Republic. The Marquis de Castellane, who has been in the King's confidence since the day of his triumphal visit to Paris, and who has been most instructive in the matter of the trip, has just returned from the King's side, and he has brought back with him a most interesting and important event.

The same experience exists on the Spanish side, and it is not surprising if the young King does not return to Madrid delighted with the report of his visit. He will have to be told that he is a King.

It is time to tell a story which has become popular and runs up a story in a fresh picture—namely, that Pope Pius X. is on the eve of visiting the young King of Spain, and that the Pope is to be accompanied by a large number of his friends and family.

"SUPPORT ROOSEVELT BY ELECTING THE STATE TICKET," SAYS LODGE

Keynotes of the Republican State Campaign of 1905 Sounded by Senator Lodge Before Middlesex Club and Guests.

The Republican party upholds the Monroe doctrine. We say to the whole world that no foreign power shall come here and establish a new state or colony in the Western Hemisphere, and the world has accepted this proposition.

Prime Minister Roovier of France said to me that President Roosevelt was the only man in the world who could have brought the Japanese and Russian envoys together to negotiate peace.

The Democratic nomination for Governor in this State is chasing around for someone to attach itself to and it is not particular what candidate it attaches itself to, so long as it finds a viable means of support.

SENATOR LODGE.

President Roosevelt has said that he looks to Massachusetts to uphold his policies and shall we now, in the zenith of his fame, refuse him the support he deserves?

I believe the Democratic speakers are trying to force into this campaign—which is a State campaign—a national issue. If a candidate on the Republican ticket is defeated on such an issue it would be regarded as a condemnation of the national administration.

We covet no one's land, but we do have imposed upon us the responsibility for the maintenance of decency and order among the islands in that arid-ben sea. We cannot shrink that responsibility and Theodore Roosevelt will not shrink it.

SENATOR DECLARES DEFEAT WOULD MEAN A SLAP AT PRESIDENT

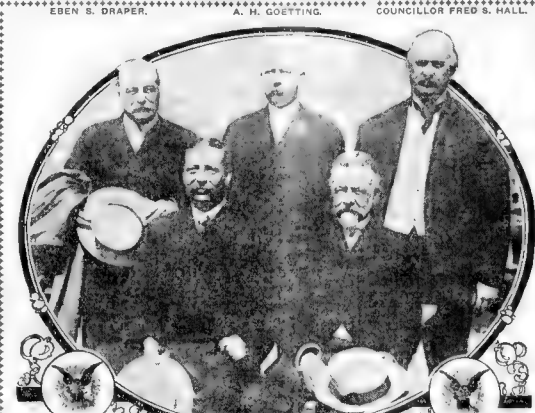

Four Hundred and Seventy Republicans Cheer Speakers at Middlesex Club—Banquet at Pemberton.

Before 470 Republicans gathered at the Middlesex Club last evening, Senator Lodge declared that the Republican party must not be defeated in the State campaign of 1905, for such a defeat would mean a slap at President Roosevelt.

A room filled with copies of a strange and mysterious book, the title of which has been here for several days, is to be found in the basement of a building in New York City. Students and the public have read request of it with intense speculation in view among masters of occult science. As to who wrote it; many contend that no man of this age could divulge the carefully guarded secrets of the world old sages and adepts in such simple language.

Dr. Wm. Frederick T. McIntyre, who claims the authorship of the work, offers to send a copy free to any person who will, in his own handwriting, send the following:

CHECK REACTION IN STOCK MARKET.

Mystery of Saturday's Situation Puzzles the Traders.
Who Like It, Which is a Pleasing Feature to Some.

Buying By Large Amounts and Short Covering Stop Decline in Wall Street and Rises All Day.

The reaction of the Wall Street market on Saturday was a puzzle to many observers. The market opened with a decline, but by the middle of the day it had recovered and was trading at a higher level than it had started at. This was due to a combination of factors, including the purchase of large amounts of stock by foreign investors and the short covering of positions by American investors. The result was a steady rise in the market throughout the day, with many stocks reaching new highs.

Big Short Interest
The market on Saturday was characterized by a large amount of short interest. This was due to the fact that many investors had sold their stock short, expecting it to decline. However, the market rose instead, and these investors were forced to buy back their stock at a higher price than they had sold it for. This added to the upward pressure on the market.

The market on Saturday was also influenced by the fact that many investors were buying large amounts of stock. This was particularly true of foreign investors, who were buying up American stocks in large quantities. This helped to drive the market higher.

Good Trade Barometer.
The market on Saturday was a good trade barometer. It showed that investors were confident about the future of the economy and were willing to invest their money in the stock market. This was a positive sign for the economy as a whole.

The market on Saturday was also influenced by the fact that many investors were buying large amounts of stock. This was particularly true of foreign investors, who were buying up American stocks in large quantities. This helped to drive the market higher.

J. P. MORGAN TO FLOAT RUSSIA'S PEACE LOAN

ROCKEFELLER BANK BEATEN IN BID FOR ISSUE.

Financier's Diplomacy Wins Russia's Favors and Bonds Are Expected Within Six Months at New York Bank.

By Boston American Special Wire.
New York, Sept. 9.—It is said in financial circles today that J. P. Morgan has won the bid to float a peace loan for Russia. The loan is expected to be issued within six months at the New York Bank. Morgan's success is attributed to his diplomatic skills and his ability to win the favor of the Russian government.

Morgan with Russians.
Morgan's success in winning the bid for the Russian peace loan is a significant achievement for him. It shows his ability to navigate the complex world of international finance and to win the trust of foreign governments. This success will likely lead to more business for Morgan in the future.

The loan is expected to be issued within six months at the New York Bank. Morgan's success is attributed to his diplomatic skills and his ability to win the favor of the Russian government.

Monarchs Promised Secrecy.
The monarchs of Russia and other countries involved in the loan have promised to keep the details of the loan secret. This is to ensure that the loan is not used as a political tool by any of the countries involved.

Special to the Sunday American. Is it Sept. 10—Concord from the chair... of the New England League this afternoon by shutting out Lowell, 7 to 0, in the last game of the season.

In the fifth inning Plummer drew a walk and scored on Barber's hit for two runs into the first lead crowd. In the first inning Plummer scored the first two runs, when he was rewarded by a single, and was touched up for five hits, including a two-bagger and a threebagger hit.

Yell was then sent to the slab and asked from the fifth inning round with the sleds, but the sleds were not to be taken into the work on bases, so effective was Plummer.

NASHUA, 4; FALL RIVER, 0. Fall River, Sept. 9.—The home team could do nothing with Jordan's delivery with men on bases, and the line work backed up by the brilliant hitting of Beard and March enabled them to defeat Fall River, 4 to 0, in a well-contested game.

HAVERHILL WON AND LOST. New Bedford, Sept. 9.—New Bedford and Haverhill split even in a double header played before a large crowd. In the first game, before shut out on the field, 4 to 0, the home team won.

ROXBURY IN FINE FORM. The Roxbury defeated the M. J. John's team of Cambridge in a game played yesterday afternoon at the closing feature of the season here. The Cambridge team, led by John's, was defeated by a score of 10 to 0.

SPARRELL PRINTS WIN. At the North End grounds yesterday a spirited 12-in. game attracted the largest crowd in years, and the Sparrells won by a score of 10 to 0.

IF YOU WISH TO BECOME AN ATHLETE GET ACQUAINTED WITH YOUR MUSCLES AND LEARN HOW TO USE THEM PROPERLY, SAYS JULIAN HAWTHORNE

By Julian Hawthorne.

If you were going to make railroadings your business, or maling, or even literature, you would think it advisable to familiarize yourself to some extent with the character and detail of these businesses. For ignorance on this point or that might endanger your invested capital. But you are apt to imagine that you may embark upon an athletic career with no further preparation than a willingness to become strong in the least possible time; and when you discover that your efforts result only in lameness, or muscles, strained joints, and the ridicule of spectators, you feel yourself, indignantly, that there is something in it, and take your name off your athletic club. If you have joined any, or sell or give away your athletic club, and lameness, if the other kind of clubs are not within your means, and therefore, for, as one who knows all about it, anatomical physical training in all its forms.

EXERCISE THE RIGHT TUTOR. Now, then, shall this vacuum be filled? How shall you get to know your muscles? Some might say by studying manuals of anatomy. There is no doubt that a study of anatomy is of great value, especially after you have obtained some practical knowledge of the subjects whereof the manuals treat, but to my thinking the best way, if not the only way, to acquire effective, practically useful information on the matter is to take exercise. Give yourself a sore triceps, or deltoid, or erector spinae, and you will find that you have learned more of the anatomy of the muscle than you could have learned from any book.

In a word, let your first step in the athletic culture be in the way of your own culture; spend an hour every day for the first few days, and you will find that you have learned more of the anatomy of the muscle than you could have learned from any book.

very painful one for you. You will feel as if you had been thrashed all over with cudgels, and torn with hooks; your physical self-consciousness will be unimpaired and agonizing. But you may console yourself with the reflection that every gymnast and athlete who ever lived has felt the same way in his time, and that it has done him no harm.

Of course you are to attempt nothing rash; do not try to put above your head a dumbbell that seems to be riveted to the floor; do not "skin the cat," or try the grand swing the first time you try to do it, nor let your introduction in the parallel bars be by way of the "dips." Recollect that these instruments, which today look so domestic and innocuous, will bite and sting you soundly to-morrow morning. A very little of them, at the ouset, will go a long way in giving you discomfit in the sequel. All you are now seeking is the location of your muscles, which the coming pain in them will reveal to you. Try to associate these pains with the particular movements which caused them, and your first person will have been learned. You are to repeat the movement to-morrow and on the succeeding days, in spite of the anguish they will cause you, taking care only to avoid overstrain.

SORENESS WILL DISAPPEAR. I must take it for granted that you will know enough not to overstrain yourself. Do things that seem to you, at the time, fairly easy, but do them a good deal so that the muscles concerned will be sure to know to-morrow that they were used to-day. With diligence and a little ingenuity you will have determined, by the end of a week, or of two weeks, something of the (fearfulness and wonderfulness of your make-up; and most of the soreness will have disappeared. It will have been one of the long-remembered tortures of your life, while it lasted; but when it is past it will seem a little matter, and will be the end of your pains and penalties, harrowing evils, and of your soreness, you may now go ahead and attain whatever gymnastic proficiency your natural limitations permit; you have raised an acquaintance with your muscles, you have obtained really useful knowledge; it is, indeed, knowledge of a very crude and imperfect sort, but it is practical as it goes, and it is at least taught you how it may be increased. If there are any parts of your body which are not sore, mark them down and find out how to make them so. You are camping on the right trail.

WILL LEARN TO CONTROL MUSCLES. For—and this is the point—the object of making acquaintance with your muscles is to know how to use them properly; where to go for them, and what to do with them. A practical is must, or athlete is a man who can, at will, contract (as it is called) any and every muscle of his body. Standing at ease, with his arms at his sides, a man can move any muscle on his body that you may name. Naturally, this ability gives him great advantage in any athletic effort—he knows just how to apply his force to the least effect. And he is able to strengthen any muscle or group of muscles he may wish, without apparatus, and with the greatest economy of time and space. But that is for a later stage of progress. For the present, make the painful but salutary acquaintance of your muscles that I have suggested, and the other things shall be added unto you.

1. LEANDER: "Well, Lulu, there is our home. Everything is in readiness for us to occupy it when we are married this month. What do you think of it, Charley?"
CHARLEY ONTHESPO: "It's a perfect little palace. I congratulate you both."
LULU: "Oh, Leander, how proud I am."

2. LULU: "Oh, isn't it grand! Glorious! What beautiful decorations! Oh, Leander, how can I thank you enough?"
CHARLEY ONTHESPO: "You certainly have done things up in great shape, old man."
LEANDER: "Lulu, show Charley through the house. I wish to see something in the kitchen."

3. LEANDER: "I'll just light this gas stove. It will look more homelike when Lulu sees it. I wonder how you work these things? I'll try it anyhow."

4. JUST! BOOM! WHANG! BOOM!

5. LULU: "Oh, Leander, I thought you were killed! Oh, WHY did you do it? HOW did you do it? Our beautiful home is burning down!"
LEANDER: "It's of no use. The fire has gotten the best of me."
CHARLEY: "It's of no use. The fire has gotten the best of me."

6. LULU: "Oh, Leander, how could you do such a thing! Our beautiful home! That lovely furniture! Burned to ashes! All that money gone up in smoke and our wedding postponed again!"
CHARLEY ONTHESPO: "Leander, old man, you certainly do get it in the neck!"
LEANDER: "Ye gods! My happiness all up in smoke! Would that it had been my funeral pyre!"

THE BOYS TRY TO FRIGHTEN THE LIFE OUT OF POOR GRANDPA WITH A HUGE SPIDER! BUT, OH, DEAR!

1. GRANDPA: "There come my youngsters. I'll pretend to be asleep."

2. BOYS: "What luck—why, there is Grandpa snoring away like a steam engine."

3. BOYS: "Let's fix up an imitation spider and see if we can't make Grandpa jump."

4. BOYS: "He will tickle him on his nose first."

5. BOYS: "Now, let's bounce it on Grandpa's nose that will make him jump."

6. GRANDPA: "Who, hello, boys! Is that you?"
